XM's weather and traffic services are far superior to anything a typical radio station provides. XM's channels provide up to the minute traffic, where local stations are always 30 minutes behind. This may not seem like much but during a accident on a major expressway this could mean hours. Plus I like being able to switch the xm station on, find out what the traffic is and change channels. I get instant traffic. On a normal station I have to wait 15 minutes and listen to commercials while waiting for a 20 second piece of information. By that time I have a third of my commute finished. XM is superior and I am a daily user. To take this system off the air would be unfair to me.
